FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

For Seniors, Standing Your Ground Just Got Easier

Buena Park, CA - October 20, 2010 - Stability and mobility for seniors and the disabled has always been an issue, and one southern California company is doing something about it.

Sky Med International, a company that has recently established itself stateside, is rapidly proving to be a serial innovator in the home medical equipment industry. The company's research and development team creates value added equipment and solutions and controls distribution through their southern California location.

One of their latest developments is the super stable Quadruple Cane Tip, a product that can be used with most walking canes, and transforms them into a cane that offers enhanced traction, a compact design that enables users to climb and descend stairs with ease, and more easily navigate uneven terrain or loose surfaces. Even better, the quad design lets the cane stand on its own!

This accessory can be added to most standard walking canes, allowing the user to upgrade their existing product. Other benefits include enhanced user stability and confidence, and a substantial reduction in fatigue to the hand, wrist and elbow normally associated with the use of canes.

Sky Med specializes in the development and manufacturing of safe, high quality and cost-effective products for the health care industry, and its products are being used in hospitals and homes, by health care professionals and family caregivers.

Emma Lai, National Sales Manager at Sky Med, heads up a talented, diverse and energetic team dedicated to using their extensive experience to serve the health care equipment field. Said Lai, "We realize that the needs of every industry client and end-user are unique, and we take time to examine the information relevant to those needs in developing the right product for each application."

Sky Med products and innovations can be seen at Medtrade Atlanta, November 16-18, 2010, at booth 2526.
